Additional facilities include a fully equipped gym and five meeting rooms with daylight and a view on the train station.

The Luxembourg Marriott Hotel Alfa is a historic landmark in Luxembourg City, designated a national monument since 1991. Built by Alfred Lefèvre and designed by Léon Bouvart, the hotel opened in 1932. Hotel Alfa quickly became a cultural hub, known for its bold design, jazz concerts, and elite gatherings. During the Ba(le of the Ardennes in 1944, it hosted American generals Pa(on, Bradley, and Eisenhower for a Christmas dinner. Post-war, it remained a prestigious venue for events, including royal celebrations and fashion shows.

Designed by internationally acclaimed interior architect Iria Degen Interiors, the hotel offers a timeless elegance with Art Deco design. Its design draws inspiration from original features like the ornate façade, Art Deco lighting, stained glass, and local artwork. Zigzag motifs from the exterior reappear throughout the interior in flooring, wallpaper, and fabrics, while soft curves and circles shape furniture, mirrors, and partitions.

Original elements—like Palisander wood sideboards, marble counters, and vintage lighting—were preserved. Art Deco touches include metallic accents, period signage, and repositioned historic paintings, now complemented by contemporary local art.

Four restored works by Julien Lefèvre (Luxembourg sculptor and son of Alfred Lefèvre), depicting Luxembourg’s regions, add cultural depth. Their vibrant colors inspired the hotel’s pale(e: blues, pinks, greens, and neutrals in public areas, with petrol blue in the standard rooms, olive and pink in the suites.
Materials like wood, stone, metal, and glass evoke the Art Deco spirit.

The hotel also features custom pieces by local artists Martine Feipel and Jean Bechameil, whose white sculptural works enhance the refined ambiance.

Nestled within the elegant Luxembourg Marriott Hotel Alfa, Brasserie Alfa offers a refined yet welcoming dining experience that celebrates the essence of Luxembourgish and French cuisine. Brasserie Alfa, Where Guests, Authenticity and Genuinely Good Food Come First—this guiding philosophy is evident in every detail, from the thoughtfully curated menu to the art deco-inspired ambiance. The brasserie reimagines culinary traditions by elevating beloved classics like poireaux vinaigrette (leeks with vinaigrette), saucisses purée (sausages with mash potatoes), and beef tartare with modern techniques and artistic presentation.
Signature dishes such as homemade pâté en croûte, Gillardeau oysters, confit de canard (confit duck), and frites à la graisse de bœuf (fries cooked in beef fat) highlight the kitchen’s commitment to flavor. With a strong emphasis on seasonality and local sourcing, the menu evolves to reflect the richness of Luxembourg’s heritage and terroir. The sophisticated yet inviting atmosphere makes it the perfect setting for everything from casual lunches to elegant dinners.
